

Stuart W. J. Reid, CBE, BVMS, PhD, DVM

Dr. Reid graduated from the University of Glasgow and became one of the university's youngest professors in 1996. In 2005 he rose to serve as the dean of the school before moving to the Royal Veterinary College in 2011. His accolades during this period include the Pfizer Academic Award, the Petplan Charitable Trust Scientific Award, the British Veterinary Association's Wooldridge Medal, and many more. In his public service, he has been a trustee of The Donkey Sanctuary since 1996 and Chairman of Trustees since 2007. The charity is now the largest of its kind worldwide. He is a Trustee of the University of London.

Dr. Reid was President of the RCVS in 2014-15, a year which saw the launch of a new Royal Charter, the introduction of the courtesy title of 'Dr' for UK veterinarians, the embracing by the College of its international diaspora, and a far-reaching overhaul of its 50-year-old governance structures. In addition, two major initiatives, Vet Futures and Mind Matters, were initiated. He also ran the 2015 London marathon to raise awareness and £14k for mental health issues in the profession.

Dr. Reid is excellent at interpreting and translating his research. He is also skilled at communicating about veterinary research. His CV includes a number of broad lecture topics such as One Health and Antibiotic resistance. In these presentations, Stuart draws on the vast knowledge generated by animal health researchers to stay current. Dr. Reid has at least 90 keynote and invited presentations in his career, a metric that suggests an outstanding communicator of science. His research interests are currently focused on zoonotic disease and antimicrobial resistance. He has over 160 scientific publications, most recently in PNAS and Science, and has secured over £15m in competitive funding during his career.
